In this compelling memoir, Gayatri Devi describes her carefree, hoyden childhood with her brothers and sisters in the palace of Cooch Behar and their adventurous trips to London and the continent, her secret six-year courtship with the dashing, internationally renowned polo player, Jai, the Maharaja of Jaipur, her marriage and entry into the glittering life of the 'pink city' of Jaipur and her struggles to adapt to unfamiliar customs and her husband's two other wives.

A Princess remembers – Gayatri Devi I recommend this memoir for its courageous woman on woman battle in India - the largest democracy on earth - with discomfiting examples of the 'diplomatic' tool of choice – the cut – the slight. We are riding elephants chasing tigers led by a young girl who shot her first panther aged 12.
