Published 1898-1904, this two-volume work includes Palladius' Greek text, critical notes and further discussion of Egyptian monasticism.

This book is titled Reflections because it is a compilation of Reflective Essays written over several years in response to different situations, circumstances, and conditions of communication. A talk on Creativity, for example, prompted him to explore if the state or quality of being creative is limited to only Art, which is often believed to be confined to drawing, painting, and sculpture, or it is inherently linked to everything which human beings habitually do. And he discovered that Creativity is intrinsic to all fields of human endeavour, be it the Humanities, or Science, or Technology, or any such thing. It is quite simply a Holistic Thinking-Feeling-Reflecting Adventure into the realm of the human spirit. He proclaims that Life lasts only because it is intrinsically Creative and Creativity has to be lived, not merely talked about or researched, by drawing upon its one and only Source: LIFE! The contents of this wonderful collection should hopefully inspire the reader to make reflection a life-long habit of the mind to put him in touch with his native talent for developing his power of thinking to full potential as the most beautiful expression of his own humanity.
