Buddy began to freak out when he realized just how serious the situation that he was getting into was. He was the next expendable asset of the company to be used for this mission. Earlier in the day, he had witnessed two previous divers that had not survived this mission. Both were more mature and far more experienced than he was. Always live your life like it is an open book because there is always someone reading it or reading more into it.

In 'Theatre & War: Notes from the Field (2016, 2018)', Dinesh writes about making theatre in zones of conflict. She analyzes practice; she describes various projects that she has undertaken 'on the ground'; she theorizes strategies that might be useful to other practitioner-researchers who are involved in similar work. In this sequel of sorts, Dinesh chooses to return to the same themes: of theatre, of war. But this time, she intentionally crafts her notes from afar. From somewhere outside the field. From somewhere outside the practice. And yet, a somewhere that is consumed by the field. And the practice. Through writing that seeks to 'do', through writing that seeks to 'perform'. Dinesh use different voices in this book. Voices that come from more traditional archival sources, which are then re-conceptualized as drama. Voices that come from sources that occupy the space between archived and lived experience, which are then shaped into creative vignettes. Voices that come from Dinesh's repertoire – her own lived experiences – that are then crafted as flash fiction about past/ present/future collaborators. By weaving together variously positioned experiences and voices through creative (re)interpretations, Theatre & War: Notes from Afar is a book that could be read; it is also a book that could be performed.

What happens when a TV show ends? More specifically, what happens when a prime-time, reality-TV, singing show ends? Of course, the obvious things happen, like the stage being cleared and audience members who watched the talented people on stage go home. But what happens with the contestants? What happens after the cameras stop rolling and viewers shut off their TV's? Mackenzie Heart wondered those questions fleetingly in her life, but she never thought she would find out the answers. Tears, laughter, betrayal, friendship, drama, and heartbreak – it turns out that all of these things happen when contestants leave the prying eyes of camera lenses. But, most importantly, she found something she never expected – Love.

Arranged for voice and easy piano, with chord symbols.
