This comprehensive guide covers all four specialties that are required for review boards: general adult and pediatric otolaryngology, head and neck surgery, otology, and facial plastic surgery.. The goal of the Otolaryngology for Memory series is to have users not just read, but also to remember key information for the otolaryngology boards. The series is devised for improved memory and mastery of its contents; it is interactive, has multiple visual aids, and uses a tiered system to help guide studying. The three- level system distinguishes material that is necessary to pass (for those seeking the basics), higher level learning (for overachievers and those taking the subspecialty boards), or intermediate in importance. The content focuses on clinical management decisions and consequences, which are high yield for the board examination. The material includes color photographs, diagrams, practice case scenarios, multiple-choice questions, and various means for self- assessment or studying with a partner.. The editorial team includes those with recent board experience, including a prior oral board examiner. Among the publication team is a recipient of a resident-nominated teaching award at their institution, and the team includes not just subspecialists in otolaryngology, but a dedicated head and neck radiologist and pathologist as well.. For those who only need to brush up on just one of the specialties, individual guides for each of the four are also offered by Plural Publishing..
