Woman Finding Her Voice Katherine Center's most recent two novels have enthralled me, but this story (published in 2009) was not as impressive. Everyone is Beautiful lacks the interesting plot and cohesive characters of her newer work. I have noticed the following themes in her writing: complex mother-daughter and romantic relationships, the benefits of exercise, and music and other creative expressions.

What did you love best about Everyone Is Beautiful? As a mother to 5 I can totally identify with this book. When you become a mother you lose yourself and it is so hard to see your way out. I have never read a book that addresses this issue. It was a fiction book but has a lot of truth to it. I adores this book.
