Leto II Atrides, the God Emperor, has ruled the universe as a tyrant for 3,500 years after becoming a hybrid of human and giant sandworm in Children of Dune. The death of all other sandworms, and his control of the remaining supply of the all-important drug melange, has allowed him to keep civilization under his complete command. Leto has been physically transformed into a worm, retaining only his human face and arms, and though he is now seemingly immortal and invulnerable to harm, he is ...

God Emperor of Dune was quite captivating. Or should I say the God Emperor himself is quite captivating, since I felt like I was pretty much reading a thorough dissection of Leto's mind(?). The book is for the most part tailored to provide the thoughts of Leto mostly in dialogues that are one-sided and resemble almost an interrogation.
