economy in the 1990s, the volume focuses on four representative women writers who belong to distinct but overlapping periods and work in different genres. Dealing with Noemia de Sousa's poetry, Lina Magaia's testimonial writings, Lilia Mompole's short fiction, and Paulina Chiziane's novels, the result is a close reading of the ways in which women have narrated and counter-narrated Mozambican nationhood to take account of the gendered power relations that traditionally underpin national community as imagined by men.

This work develops an analysis of state formation in Mozambique from the perspective of three processes: the nature of state and market relations; the construction of local state power structures; and finally the importance of lineage politics and its impact on local power structures.
